

Abstract

5 A frequency estimate of an incoming data input is generated and transmitted with network traffic to a receiver. At the receiver, the estimate is recovered, decoded, and is used to seed an algorithm for locking the data access rate of the receiver to the incoming data. Data is buffered in buffers at each end of the system, and data flow out of the buffers is managed depending upon data rate.